

Background

Terrel is a working grain producer in the Saskatchewan agriculture industry, and has been successfully farming 12,000 acres of mixed crops and livestock for over 25 years. He has owned and managed all aspects of small to mid-sized agribusiness operations, and is a specialist in project management, business planning, supply management, transportation and logistics, equipment, sales and rural services. Terrel holds a Bachelor's degree in Education and has lectured extensively on the practical application of innovative technologies, including ecommerce and GPS based platforms, to small production businesses, retail, and community services. He has also sourced public private partnerships, developed and project managed visionary regional wireless networks to link remote operations and business communities to major markets. He is an experienced community executive and adept in working with community based economic development, youth employment and not-for-profit organizations.

Terrel's services include profitable agribusiness planning and development; land and materials management, economic development and small business planning, volunteerism and Not-For-Profit, rural services, equipment, transportation, logistics, and major communication and customer facing technologies and infrastructure.
