

George Brown

George Brown has worked in a number of West Australian State Government agencies in the area of strategic transport policy and planning for over 20 years. He has had a substantial role in the design, development and implementation of policy in regards to central city access, public transport and the interaction of land use and transport, parking demand assessment, parking policy and parking taxation. Most recently he has been working on a metropolitan region access and parking issues and strategy.

Since 2013 has been undertaking private consultancy specializing in transport planning and policy, urban transport policy, parking demand assessment, planning and policy and urban design and provision of public transport.

George holds a Master Degree in City Policy and Sustainability plus postgraduate qualifications in Occupational Health and Safety and Human Resource Management